

God uses everything, even tech: The visual aspect of service

presented by Larry and Laura Blackaby

Todd Elliott, author of I love Jesus But I Hate Christmas, says that “production well done is an art form,” meaning that those who practice the technical arts are artists. This means YOU are an artist, and you bring something unique to the table that no one else can bring.

Notes ... Ideas ... Random Thoughts ... Doodles ...

“Electronic media can project colors, images and videos that can move congregations to deep worship.” Dr. William Dyrness, professor of theology, in Worship Leader Magazine

“The combined forces of music, drama, visuals and production done well can be unstoppable.” Todd Elliott, author
